The Society and Culture Association is holding its second competition based on the theme of 'Intercultural Communication'. The theme reinforces a major concept addressed by all Society and Culture students.

We're looking for images that capture a sense of intercultural communication in action.

This may include interactions between people of different ages, ethnic background, gender or location. It may be a photo representing effective communication or misunderstandings... the options are endless.

To enter, send your high resolution jpeg (up to 5MB) entries to our judging panel at competition@scansw.com.au.

Each entry must be an electronic copy and be accompanied by up to 250 words in response to the question:

'How does your photo demonstrate intercultural communication in action?'

Entries will be judged on the content of both the photo and written response.

If you have any questions, require further information or would like electronic copies of these forms, please visit www.scansw.com.au

Entries close Friday 18th September, 2009.

Prizes:

Winners will be placed on our website and published in the Culturescope journal. Each winner will receive a certificate
